FISCAL AND POLICY NOTE

House Bill 967
Ways and Means

(Delegate McDermott, et al.)

Income Tax Return Preparers - False Returns or Claims for Refund - Statute of Limitations

This bill establishes that an income tax preparer that violates the State's prohibition on preparing a false income tax return or a false claim for a refund may be prosecuted at any time for the violation.

The bill applies prospectively to income tax returns or claims for refunds filed on or after the bill's October 1, 2013 effective date.

Fiscal Summary

State Effect: Potential minimal increase in general fund revenues from monetary penalties imposed in criminal cases prosecuted under the extended statute of limitations. Minimal increase in general fund revenues from tax returns adjusted as a result of investigations conducted pursuant to the extended statute of limitations. Potential minimal increase in general fund expenditures from incarceration penalties imposed in convictions secured as a result of the bill's extension of the statute of limitations for this offense. However, any fiscal impact from the bill does not occur until FY 2017.

Local Effect: Potential minimal increase in local revenues and expenditures starting in FY 2017 from additional convictions resulting from the bill's extension of the statute of limitations for this offense.

Small Business Effect: None.

Analysis

Current Law: In general, a prosecution for a misdemeanor must be instituted within one year after the offense was committed. However, if a statute provides that a misdemeanor is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, or that a person is subject to § 5-106(b) of the Courts and Judicial Proceedings Article, the State may institute a prosecution for the misdemeanor at any time.

An income tax return preparer who willfully prepares, assists in preparing, or causes the preparation of a false income tax return or claim for refund with fraudulent intent or the intent to evade income tax is guilty of a misdemeanor. Violators are subject to imprisonment for up to five years and/or a $10,000 maximum fine. A prosecution for this offense must be instituted within three years after the date on which the offense was committed.

Background: The District Court advises that it did not handle any cases involving the preparation of a false tax return by an income tax preparer during fiscal 2012. The Maryland State Commission on Criminal Sentencing Policy advises that there were five convictions for this offense in the State's circuit courts during fiscal 2012. Four of the convictions were attributable to one individual.
