

Article - Family Law

[Previous][Next]

§4–508.

(a) An interim protective order, temporary protective order, and final protective order issued under this subtitle shall state that a violation of the order may result in:

- (1) criminal prosecution; and
- (2) imprisonment or fine or both.

(b) A temporary protective order and final protective order issued under this subtitle shall state that a violation of the order may result in a finding of contempt.

[Previous][Next]