Analysis

Bill Summary/Current Law: In general, an individual who is receiving a normal service or vested allowance under SPRS may accept employment with a participating employer of SPRS on a permanent, contractual, or temporary basis if the individual has been separated from service for more than 45 days and notifies the board of trustees:

- of the individual’s intention to accept the employment; and
- of the compensation that will be paid to the individual.

If the employment is on a permanent or contractual basis, the individual’s allowance is not subject to a reduction. Unless an individual has been retired for at least five years or participates in the Deferred Retirement Option Program, an individual employed on a temporary basis, as defined, is subject to a reduction in the allowance. The reduction is equal to the amount by which sum of the initial annual allowance and the annual compensation exceeds the average final compensation at the time of retirement, and it is subject to specified limits.

Background: The SRPS board of trustees advised the Joint Committee on Pensions (JCP) that current statutory language regarding the reemployment of SPRS retirees is not clear. The board asked JCP to sponsor legislation to make clarifying, nonsubstantive changes to the statute, and JCP agreed to sponsor the legislation.
