Analysis

Current Law: The Maryland State Department of Education, in consultation with the Maryland Department of Health (MDH), must adopt regulations requiring a physical examination for children entering the Maryland public school system for the first time. The regulations must require each child to have a physical examination completed within the nine-month period before entering the public school system or the six-month period after entering the public school system. The physical examination must be completed by a physician or a certified nurse practitioner.

For each school year, each public school must report to the local board of education or local health department the number of children entering the public school system for the first time who have not had a physical examination due to lack of access to health care, insufficient financial resources, or any other reason, including a religious reason, as the public school deems appropriate. The local board of education or local health department must report the information to MDH.
