To Whom it May Concern:

I am opposed to HB832. As a homeschooler of 10 years, I see no benefit to having a selected council advise those of us in the trenches on homeschooling. A benefit to our children is the individualization of education possible. A group of appointed council members cannot possibly suffice to represent the diversity of our Maryland families, children, and their needed education. Where is the voice of those actively homeschooling? I, for one, have not been asked for my input on how I could best be represented. Let's take the time to gather input from those actually homeschooling. I stand strongly opposed to HB832

Respectfully,

Brandi Duke
