Regulations of COMAR Affected

Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services:

Police Training Commission: General Regulations: COMAR 12.04.01.07 and .17

Legal Analysis

Background

In 2003, regulations were amended to require field training for certification of new police officers. The Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services is proposing to amend the language of COMAR 12.04.01.07 and .17, governing how the Police Training Commission field trains police officers. The changes replace, expand, and clarify regulations dealing with the field training required for the certification and recertification of law enforcement officers.

Summary of Regulations

The regulation authorizes the commission to recertify applicants, provided that field training standards under Regulation .17 (which is amended by this action). Regulation .17 now requires field training to be successfully completed by an individual for each law enforcement agency employing the individual and before an agency submits the application for certification.

Field training must be completed by an individual after the individual has met entrance-level training standards or recertification training standards. If the individual is employed by more than one agency, the individual must successfully complete field training for each agency before certification.

The regulations establish that the minimum for commission-approved field training is 250 hours, unless the individual has received a waiver under the regulations. Minimums of 160 hours or 80 hours are provided for individuals applying for certification or recertification with specified waivers.

Field training must be coordinated and monitored by the law enforcement agency head, or an employee designated by the head, who has successfully completed a commission-approved supervisor training course and field training.

A field training officer must meet the requirements established by the commission; be a police officer for at least two years immediately prior to being approved to be a field training officer; have successfully completed a commission-approved field training officer course; successfully complete a minimum of seven hours of additional instruction every three years; and be approved by the commission. Successfully completing the initial field training officer course requires attendance at a minimum 90% of total instruction hours and a score of at least 70% on each test given as part of the course. The agency conducting the field training course must report the names of those who successfully complete the course. The Deputy Director is authorized to excuse an individual from all or a portion of the minimum requirements if the individual submits documentation of equivalent training and the Deputy Director verifies the equivalency.

A field training officer course must be approved by the commission. An application for approval for a course must be submitted to the commission at least 20 days before the course begins and be in the format required by the commission. The application for course approval must include the number of hours of instruction, the instructors' names, and testing and evaluation methods. If the commission approves the course, it will assign the course an identification number. Course approval is valid for three years. Approvals for changes to the course must be made at least 20 days before implementation. The course must be conducted only by certified individuals, or those exempted under the regulations, for a minimum of 21 hours and on the training objectives required by the commission.

A law enforcement agency must adopt written policy on field training and field training officers course based on a model policy approved by the commission, which must minimally include the length of the course, an outline of the training subjects, responsibilities of the course supervisor, the selection process for training officers, guidelines for performance evaluations, reporting responsibilities of officers, and guidelines of evaluation of officers.

During field training, the individual must be under the direct supervision of a field training officer or a police officer of supervisory rank if the training officer is not available. Under extenuating circumstances, and for a period of up to 10% of total training, the individual may be under the supervision of an agency police officer who is not a training officer or an officer of supervisory rank. During field training, an individual who is engaged in specialized training or orientation duties that do not entail enforcement functions may engage in that training of those duties for up to 5% of the training. If the individual completes the field training, the law enforcement agency head or designated employee must complete and provide a written statement to the commission of the completion and sign and date the statement.

The agency is to maintain, for a minimum of three years, the following documentation from the field training: written policies; rosters of participants; tests; test scores; description of the evaluation process; lesson plans and guides; outlines of training; competence reports; and any other documentation required by the commission.

Finally, the field officer training course and the field training are subject to review and audit by the commission. The commission may suspend or revoke approval of a field officer training course or field training, if the commission determines that they fail to meet the commission's requirements.

Legal Issue

The regulations present no legal issues of concern.

Statutory Authority and Legislative Intent

The department cites § 3-208(a) of the State Public Safety Article and § 2-109 of the Correctional Services Article as legal authority for the proposed regulations. Specifically, § 3-208(a) gives the commission the power and duty to adopt regulations necessary or appropriate to carry out the subtitle, and § 3-207(a) confers the authority provides the commission with enumerated powers relevant to the approval of standards for police training schools and instructors, while § 3-209 generally requires the commission to certify police officers that meet the commission's standards. This authority is correct and complete. The regulations comply with the legislative intent of the law.
