Analysis

Current Law: Medical assistance coverage must be provided to all eligible pregnant women whose family income is at or below 200% of the FPL. Pregnant women whose family income is 185% - 200% of the FPL are eligible for medical assistance under the CHIP program. Pregnant women whose family income is below 185% of the FPL are eligible for Medicaid. This bill expands CHIP coverage to include eligible pregnant women with income at or below 250% of the FPL.

State Expenditures: CHIP expenditures will increase by an estimated $2,812,500 (50% federal funds and 50% general funds) for fiscal 2001, which reflects the bill's October 1, 2000 effective date. Future year expenditures reflect annualization and 6% health care inflation. This estimate is based upon the following facts and assumptions:

- approximately 250 pregnant women per year are enrolled in the CHIP expansion group (185% - 200% FPL incomes);
- 625 (250 x 2.5) pregnant women are assumed to participate if 200% - 250% FPL income guidelines were adopted; and
- the average cost per woman is assumed to be $6,000.
