Analysis

Background: Chapter 6 of 1990 legalized the 1988 edition of the Baltimore County Code. Baltimore County is one of nine counties that operate under the charter form of government. Charter counties have express powers delegated to them by the General Assembly. Charter counties do not need to seek General Assembly approval for changes to local laws except laws regarding alcoholic beverages, courts, criminal law, education, campaign finance regulation, gambling, and taxation exclusive of property taxes. However, legalizing changes enacted by the General Assembly to the new edition of the county code and any supplement must receive approval of the General Assembly.

Baltimore County advises that publication and sales of the new edition of the Baltimore County Code are handled by an outside vendor; the vendor pays all costs to publish the code and receives all revenues from its sale.
