Analysis

Current Law: Circuit court clerks are elected officials whose salaries are paid by the State. The maximum annual salary for a circuit court clerk is $85,000, as set by BPW on the basis of the relative volume of business and receipts in each clerk's office. Pursuant to the Constitution of Maryland, a circuit court clerk's salary may neither increase nor decrease during the clerk's term of office.

Clerks of the circuit courts are elected at the November general election. They take the oath of office the following December 1 and serve four-year terms. The next election for circuit court clerks will take place in November 2006.

Background: Every four years, BPW sets the salary for circuit court clerks annually based on the relative volume of business and receipts.

There are currently four salary levels for circuit court clerks. Five clerks (A level) currently earn $85,000 per year; three (B level) receive $83,250; nine (C level) receive $82,100; and seven (D level) receive $79,100. The clerks of the circuit court do not receive annual cost-of-living increases.

Chapter 27 of 2002 increased the maximum allowable salary for circuit court clerks from $75,000 to $85,000, a 13% increase. Since 1982, the circuit courts clerks' maximum allowable salary has increased as set forth in Exhibit 1.

Circuit Court Clerks' Salary Increases

Year	Maximum Salary	Percentage Increase
1982	$37,500	--
1986	$45,000	20%

1994	$64,000	7%
1998	$75,000	17%
2002	$85,000	13%

State Expenditures: Exhibit 2 shows the current and projected salaries of the 24 circuit court clerks. This analysis assumes that the Board of Public Works would increase the salaries of the clerks who currently earn $85,000 to $98,500, a 15.9% increase, and increase the salaries of the other clerks by 15.9%.
