Analysis

Bill Summary: A "vehicle" includes a motor vehicle, streetcar, locomotive engine, or train. A person is prohibited from causing the death of another due to driving, operating, or controlling a vehicle or vessel in "a criminally negligent manner." A person acts in a criminally negligent manner when the person should be aware, but fails to perceive, that the person's conduct creates a substantial risk that manslaughter will occur and the failure to perceive is a substantial deviation from the standard of care that would be exercised by a reasonable person.

A person who commits this offense is guilty of a misdemeanor and is subject to maximum penalties of imprisonment for one year and/or a fine of $5,000.

It is the intent of the General Assembly that the term “substantial deviation from the standard of care” be interpreted synonymously with the term “gross deviation from the standard of care” as contained in the Model Penal Code of the American Law Institute.

A person who violates the Maryland Vehicle Law by causing the death of another as a result of driving, operating, or controlling a vehicle in a negligent manner has not committed the offense of criminally negligent manslaughter by vehicle or vessel.

Current Law: State law does not contain a separate offense for criminally negligent manslaughter by vehicle or vessel. However, a person is prohibited from committing manslaughter by motor vehicle by causing the death of another as a result of driving, operating, or controlling a motor vehicle in a grossly negligent manner. A person who violates this provision is guilty of a felony and is subject to maximum penalties of imprisonment for 10 years and/or a fine of $5,000.

The standard of “gross negligence” is a common law concept. In the case State v. Kramer, 318 Md. 756 (1990), the Court of Appeals said that to prove “gross negligence” as a matter of law, the evidence must be sufficient, beyond a reasonable doubt, to establish that the defendant had a wanton or reckless disregard for human life in the operation of the automobile. The conduct must be extraordinary or outrageous to meet this standard. In the case Boyd v. State, 22 Md. App. 539 (1974), (certiorari denied 283 Md. 729 (1978)) the Court of Special Appeals discussed factors directly relevant to the issue of guilt or innocence of manslaughter due to gross negligence in the operation of a vehicle or vessel. They include:

- drinking;
- failure to keep a proper lookout and maintain proper control of the vehicle;
- excessive speed ‘under the circumstances’;
- flight from the scene without any effort to ascertain the extent of injuries;
- the nature and force of impact;
- unusual or erratic driving prior to impact;
- the presence or absence of skid or brush marks;
- the nature of the injuries and damage to the vehicle involved; and
- the nature of the neighborhood and environment where the accident took place.

Further, the Court of Special Appeals stated in Allen v. State, 39 Md. App. 686 (1978) (certiorari denied 283 Md. 729 (1978)) that the post-impact conduct of the accused may properly be a relevant factor when considering the issue of gross negligence.

A person is guilty of reckless driving if a motor vehicle is driven in wanton or willful disregard for the safety of persons or property or in a manner that indicates a wanton or willful disregard for the safety of persons or property. A violation is a misdemeanor, subject to a fine up to $1,000. The Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) is also required to assess six points against the driver's license. The District Court assesses a fine of $580 for this offense.

A person is guilty of negligent driving if the motor vehicle is driven in a careless or imprudent manner that endangers any property or the life or safety of any individual. This violation is a misdemeanor, subject to a maximum fine of $500. The MVA must assess one point against the driver's license. The District Court currently assesses a fine of $280 for this offense.

If a person accumulates five points or more on a driver's license within two years, the MVA must require attendance at a driver education conference. The MVA must issue a notice of suspension to a driver who accumulates 8 points on the driver's license and must issue a notice of license revocation to a person who accumulates 12 points within 2 years.

Background: Section 2.02(2)(d) of the Model Penal Code of the American Law Institute provides:

A person acts negligently with respect to a material element of an offense when he should be aware of a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the material element exists or will result from his conduct. The risk must be of such nature and degree that the actor's failure to perceive it, considering the nature and purpose of his conduct and the circumstances known to him involves a gross deviation from the standard of care that a reasonable person would observe in the actor's situation.

State Revenues: General fund revenues could increase minimally as a result of the bill's monetary penalty provision from cases heard in the District Court.

State Expenditures: General fund expenditures could increase minimally as a result of the bill's incarceration penalty due to more people being committed to Division of Correction (DOC) facilities and increased payments to counties for reimbursement of inmate costs. The number of people convicted of this proposed crime is expected to be minimal. DOC reports that for all charges related to homicide with a motor vehicle, including impaired driving or manslaughter, there were 15 intakes in fiscal 2005, 19 intakes in fiscal 2004 and 14 intakes in fiscal 2003.

Persons serving a sentence of one year or less in a jurisdiction other than Baltimore City are sentenced to local detention facilities. The State reimburses counties for part of their incarceration costs, on a per diem basis, after a person has served 90 days. State per diem reimbursements for fiscal 2007 are estimated to range from $17 to $65 per inmate depending upon the jurisdiction. Persons sentenced to such a term in Baltimore City are generally incarcerated in DOC facilities. Currently, the DOC average total cost per inmate, including overhead, is estimated at $1,974 per month. This bill alone, however, should not create the need for additional beds, personnel, or facilities. Excluding overhead, the average cost of housing a new DOC inmate (including medical costs and variables) is $341 per month.

Local Expenditures: Expenditures could increase minimally as a result of the bill's incarceration penalty. Counties pay the full cost of incarceration for people in their facilities for the first 90 days of the sentence, plus part of the per diem cost after 90 days. Per diem operating costs of local detention facilities are expected to range from $33 to $119 per inmate in fiscal 2007.
