Analysis

Current Law: Three official commemorative days and one month are recognized in State law as shown in Exhibit 1. In addition, the Governor must issue a proclamation each year encouraging citizens and other individuals to observe a moment of silence at 3 p.m. on Memorial Day to unite in remembrance and commemorate the heroic acts and efforts of Marylanders who have served and died in the U.S. armed forces.

Background: Black History Month is celebrated nationwide during the month of February and became an official national observance in 1976. The idea of commemorating the achievements and contributions made by African Americans to the nation developed in 1915 when Dr. Carter Godwin Woodson founded the Association for the Study of African American Life and History (ASALH). Through the association, Dr.

Woodson began pressing for the establishment of a Black History Week as a way to bring national attention to the many accomplishments of African Americans and to neutralize the negative distortions that were promoted by many people in society at that time.

In 1926, the association established the first Black History Week which was observed during the second week of February to coincide with the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass. The response to this observance was overwhelming, with Black History clubs being established and school teachers requesting materials to instruct their students. To serve the needs of school teachers, ASALH began publishing photographs and portraits of important African Americans. In 1976, this observance officially became Black History Month.
