The creation of the maritime heritage center would invigorate the waterfront core of the city of Cambridge as well as activate the maritime and shipbuilding industry through the preservation of historic vessels and skills.

MARINE RAILWAY: Operation of the marine rail will reduce the operating costs of nonprofit vessel owners of the Eastern Seaboard States; and will reduce the demand for other public funding for these nonprofits. The Pride of Baltimore has submitted a letter in support of the project. Currently they are hauled yearly in Virginia at great expense.

VOCATIONAL: The Maritime Heritage Center will create jobs, providing new skill sets (Marine Vocational training) for residents in the Mid-Atlantic States; the School will be centrally located to serve 30 million people within 3 hours travel time.

HISTORIC/TOURISM: National Maritime Heritage: The Maritime Heritage Center will be a significant destination within the Tourism industry both nationally and internationally. The Chesapeake Bay maritime history from pre-colonial period to the 2nd World War are all strongly connected to the history of the area; maritime history is intrinsic to the tourism interest in visiting the Chesapeake Bay area.

Sage Policy Group has illustrated a $7 million impact to the local businesses during construction and upon build out an annual increase to local sales of $3 million annually.

Federal appropriation requests have been submitted through the offices of Senator Mikulski and Congressman Kratochvil in the amount of $3.5 million for Federal FY 2011. State funding is imperative in receiving funding from the Federal Government. In addition to requesting this Bond Bill, the Foundation is currently in discussion with Maryland State Highway Administration: anticipating filing for Transportation Enhancement Program funding in FY 12.

The development of the Richardson Maritime Heritage Center Phase II will be a $9 million project with a significant long term benefit for the City, County, State and the Eastern Seaboard.
