Analysis

Current Law: In Maryland, a promoter of a boxing, kick-boxing, wrestling, or mixed-martial arts event is prohibited from selling or exchanging a ticket for an amount that exceeds the box office price. Baltimore City code prohibits an unlicensed person from engaging in the business of selling tickets to specified exhibitions, performances, games, or sports. The licensed ticket vendors may not accept a greater amount than the regular price, plus tax, of the ticket. The sale of each ticket is a separate offense.

Background: A majority of states have statutes that either restrict or prohibit the sale of tickets for a profit, otherwise known as ticket scalping. For example, Virginia authorizes localities to regulate ticket scalping. Delaware generally allows ticket scalping but prohibits the practice on the day of events at specified locations. Arkansas prohibits ticket scalping to events held for the benefit of charity.
