State Government - Commemorative Days - Thurgood Marshall Day

This bill requires the Governor to annually proclaim July 2 as Thurgood Marshall Day and to urge educational and cultural organizations to observe Thurgood Marshall Day properly.

The bill takes effect June 1, 2011.

Fiscal Summary

State Effect: Commemorating Thurgood Marshall Day does not affect governmental finances.

Local Effect: None.

Small Business Effect: None.

Analysis

Current Law: Eight official commemorative days and three months are recognized in State law as shown in Exhibit 1. The Governor also must issue a proclamation each year encouraging citizens and other individuals to observe a moment of silence at 3 p.m. on Memorial Day to unite in remembrance and commemorate the heroic acts and efforts of Marylanders who have served and died in the U.S. armed forces.

Background: Thurgood Marshall was born in Baltimore in 1908 and began working for the Baltimore branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People upon his graduation from Howard University Law School in 1933. His first major case was Murray v. Pearson (1935), which prohibited the University of Maryland School of Law (which, in 1930, had rejected Marshall's application on the basis of race) from rejecting applicants based on race.

Marshall became one of the most prominent civil rights attorneys in the nation. He eventually argued 32 cases before the Supreme Court and won 29 of them, including Shelley v. Kraemer (1948) – which made racial covenants in real estate unenforceable – and Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka (1954). Marshall was appointed to the Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit in 1961, and became the United States Solicitor General in 1965. In 1967, Marshall became the first African American justice to serve on the United States Supreme Court; he served for 24 years before his retirement. Marshall died in 1993.
