Ethics - Executive Branch - Lobbying by Former Officials

This bill prohibits a former State official or public official of the Executive Branch who had duties substantially related to State legislative matters and the General Assembly, or to the procurement of goods and services, from assisting or representing another party for compensation in a matter that is the subject of legislative action or in a procurement matter before the official's former agency, respectively, for one year after the official leaves State employment. However, in the case of a legislative matter, the bill's prohibitions do not apply to the former official's representation of a municipal corporation, county, or State governmental entity; in the case of a procurement matter before the official's former agency, the prohibitions do not apply to the former official's representation of another State governmental entity.

Analysis

Current Law: A former member of the General Assembly may not assist or represent another party for compensation in a matter that is the subject of legislative action until the conclusion of the next regular session that begins after a member leaves office. The prohibition does not apply to a former member's representation of a municipal corporation, county, or State governmental entity.

A former official or employee other than a General Assembly member may not assist or represent a party, other than the State, in a case, contract, or other specific matter for compensation that involves State government if the former official or employee participated significantly in the matter while employed by the State.

“State official” is defined in statute and includes a constitutional officer or officer-elect in an executive unit. In most cases, whether an individual in an executive unit is a “public official” is determined by the State Ethics Commission according to criteria generally relating to the individual’s pay grade, decisionmaking authority, and/or role as an advisor to a person with decisionmaking authority. Members, appointees, and employees of the Maryland Stadium Authority and the Canal Place Preservation and Development Authority, and members of the Emergency Medical Services Board, are specifically identified in statute as public officials in the Executive Branch.
