Analysis

Current Law:

In Baltimore City, a racetrack license authorizes its holder to sell beer, wine, and liquor at one or more locations in the confines of the racing park. The license fee is $100 per day that the park is operating, with additional annual fees of $500 if the licensee provides live entertainment, and/or $200 if the licensee provides outdoor table or café service.

An alcoholic beverages license in Baltimore City generally expires 180 days after a license holder has closed a business or stopped selling alcoholic beverages at the licensed premises.

Additional Comments: Pimlico Race Course, located on Park Avenue in Baltimore City, began a large renovation project in July 2025, requiring the shutdown of operations (including alcohol sales) until reopening.
