To: Senate Education Health, and Environmental Affairs Committee From: Lisa Radov, President and Chairman, Maryland Votes for Animals, Inc. Re: Natural Resources - Organized Hunting Contests – Restriction – SB 200 - SUPPORT

Chairman Pinsky, Vice Chairman Kagan, members of the Education, Health, and Environmental Affairs Committee, thank you for the opportunity to testify before to you today. My name is Lisa Radov. I am the President and Chairman of Maryland Votes for Animals. We champion humane legislation to improve the lives of animals in Maryland. Speaking for Maryland Votes for Animals, our Board of Directors, and our members across Maryland, I respectfully request that the Senate Education, Health, and Environmental Affairs Committee vote favorably for Natural Resources - Organized Hunting Contests – Restrictions – SB 200.

This bill would prohibit a person from sponsoring, conducting, or participating in an organized killing contest of certain mammals as defined in the bill, where the sole purpose of the event is to kill the largest number of animals possible for cash or prizes. The bodies of these animals are usually left or discarded, leaving their young to starve.

Two years ago, this committee voted favorably to protect Cownose Rays from organized killing contests solely for cash or prizes. The gruesome photos of the contests were filmed and shared on social media. Just as the Cownose Rays Bill did not tie the hands of fishermen and only applied to the killing contests, this bill only applies to organized killing contests of these mammals where the sole objective is to kill as many of that animal species as possible during the contest. It would not apply to responsible hunting or control of animal predators on a person's property.

Although some have argued that these contests are a way to control the population of these animal species, science does not back that up. The Chairman of the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission cited the contests as "counterproductive" and that they can have the opposite effect of reducing populations, as the animals increase reproduction to compensate for the sudden slaughter of a large number of animals in an area.

The general public generally opposes killing of animals unless they are legitimately being used for food, fur, or responsible species management that is recommended by the Department of Natural Resources. Many hunters eschew the contests because they feel that they are "unsportsmanlike" and do not follow the principles of responsible hunting. In September, Washington became the seventh state, joining Arizona, California, Colorado, Massachusetts, New Mexico, and Vermont, to make these contests illegal.

Maryland does not want to be known as a state where images of these cruel contests with piles of dead foxes, coyotes, and raccoons are broadcast far and wide on social media. We have seen the power of social media in the past few weeks. Let's send a message that Maryland is not a state that allows these cruel killing contests.

I would like to thank Senator Young for sponsoring SB 200 and urge a favorable report.
