

As a Baltimore resident who has previously lived in proximity to one of John Hopkins University's campuses, I can testify that the university's private police did not make me feel safer. A university should not have the power of a police force. They are a danger to the community.