

CREATING CHANGE · IMPROVING LIVES

House Economic Matters Committee

February 15, 2022

HB 496: Labor and Employment – Family and Medical Leave Insurance Program – Establishment Position: Support

Workers with disabilities and their families need a broad array of supports to address their needs, lead independent lives and to contribute and participate fully in their communities and the economy. Access to paid family and medical leave is an important part of the range of supports people with disabilities and their families need. This is true for the estimated 26.3 million working age adults with disabilities, along with the 36 million working age adults with family members with disabilities living in the US, and the 11% of Marylanders with a disability and their families.

WHY is this legislation important to people with disabilities and their families?

- Paid leave can increase economic security and stability for people with disabilities and their families. Maintaining the balance of work and care for oneself or a family member is a challenge for anyone, but is particularly challenging for people who provide that care to family members with disabilities. The effects of disability are intrinsically tied to issues of economic insecurity and instability. The Center for American Progress notes that "disability or illness can lead to job loss and reduced earnings, barriers to education and skills development, significant additional expenses, and many other challenges that can lead to economic hardship."
- ➤ One survey found that more than 70% of family members providing care for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities reported that caregiving interfered with their work.
- Another study found that the odds of a worker losing income increase by 48% if the worker lives with a child with disabilities and special health care needs and by 29% if the worker is caring for an adult with disabilities or health issues. Having access to dedicated paid family leave reduces the odds of losing income by 30%.
- Paid leave can increase opportunities for workers, including people with disabilities, to take time off if they experience a serious health condition or if their needs intensify due to their disability. People with disabilities are more likely to be employed in low-wage, part-time jobs which typically provide fewer benefits.

The Council understands the ongoing concern expressed by the providers who support people with developmental disabilities. Specifically, that the required contribution by employers – in this case those organizations that provide support to people with developmental disabilities – is another unfunded mandate. People who self-direct their services most often employ a small number of direct support professionals. Therefore, exempting contributions from small employers does help those people. However, if people are unable to find replacement staff for employees' eligible for extended leave under the bill, their services and supports will be impacted.

While the contributions ensure a solvent system of necessary supports, and preliminary data shows offering paid family and medical leave may help with recruitment and retention of direct support professionals, it may prove too difficult to find a direct support professional to provide the support when another takes leave.

Paid leave means all employees can give and get the support they need – to their children, their families, or themselves. For people with disabilities and their families, access to paid leave means increased opportunity, flexibility, and financial resources.

For these reasons, the Maryland Developmental Disabilities Council supports HB 496.

Contact: Rachel London, Executive Director: RLondon@md-council.org

&lt;sup>1</sup> American Community Survey estimates.

&lt;sup>II</sup> January 2015. Center for American Progress, A Fair Shot for Workers with Disabilities.

iii May 2011. The Arc. 2010 FINDS National Survey: Family and Individual Needs for Disability Support.

iv June 2015. AARP. Caregiving in the US.