

A waiting period allowing a reasonable amount of time between receiving vital medical information and the taking of an irrevocable and serious health decision is of the essence to an informed consent to any serious medical procedure. As HB1161 provides, a waiting period is entirely reasonable, non-burdensome and conducive to the best interests and health of the pregnant woman.