

Strongly oppose. There is no actual benefit to the creation of the proposed council and every stated benefit has a more homeschool-friendly alternative. This council would be redundant and leave those exercising the right to choose a home education for their children open to having that right unlawfully curtailed or outright denied, giving way too much legal or persuasional power to those who disagree with others' educational right to choose. It leaves homeschoolers open to harassment from those unfriendly to their legally and lawfully made educational choices. While it may not come to this, the opportunity for corruption should this council become a reality, is much too great.

OPPOSE

Kimberly Baqqi

Laurel, MD