This year my son started at Ivymount School after years of struggles in the public option. In only a few months, he has found a place at Ivymount where we have seen the most progress from him out of any school year thus far. The teachers truly understand him and socially he feels known. The teachers are truly remarkable and needed for groups of students not able to be served in the public setting. For these reasons I hope you highly consider the nonpublic teacher salary bill.
