Senate Bill 557
February 22, 2023
Position: Favorable

Misters Chairmen and members of the Committees, thank you for this opportunity to testify about nutrition, well-being, and the children of our State. I am Lee Hudson, assistant to the bishop for the Delaware-Maryland Synod, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, in public policy.

Our community's work in policy advocacy began as a commitment to end hunger. That remains one of the principal goals of our work, nationally and internationally, as policy advocates. It was advanced in 1999 with, "Economic Life," (ELCA, re: the moral imperative to seek sufficient, sustainable livelihood for all). We maintain a permanent institutional appeal to address and advocate an end to hunger.

Child hunger is something like a permanent public scandal in the United States. One of the social defects illuminated during the Covid19 pandemic was a spike in malnourishment among children because of the loss of nutritional resources delivered by the public education system.

According to Save the Children, twelve million American children are hungry: Kentucky, Maryland, Oklahoma, and Washington, D.C. report a 22% rate of family hunger: in Maryland, Hispanic and Black families are almost 4 times as likely to face hunger as white families. For all the good work Maryland has done to address poverty, in health care, work-fare, EITC, etc. these statistics are shouting that something is being left out.

It's Maryland's children. We must not leave out Maryland's children. There are social, public health, education, and economic consequences to child hunger. Leave those aside in your consideration of Senate Bill 557. It is cruelly calculating to measure malnourished children with a putative profit-loss formula. Hungry children have no agency over their condition.

Maryland children, and almost certainly capturing the hungry ones, are mandated by law to be public school children. Give them two acceptable meals a day. Just feed them. Diminish these appalling child hunger statistics, at least some, at least in Maryland. Pass Senate Bill 557.

Thank you for this important hearing.

Lee Hudson
