

HEALTH CARE FOR THE HOMELESS TESTIMONY
IN SUPPORT OF
SB 546 - Criminal Procedure - Medical Emergency - Immunity

House Judiciary Committee
March 9, 2023

Health Care for the Homeless supports SB 546, which would 1) clarify that the victim of the overdose or medical emergency is provided the same immunity from arrest, charge and prosecution as the person calling for help; and 2) ensure the person who survives an overdose or other medical emergency is protected from parole or probation violation.

In 2016, Maryland sustained 1816 opioid-related deaths, a 70% increase from 2015 and a four-fold increase since 2010. Heroin-related deaths increased by 62% (from 748 to 1212) between 2015 and 2016, and fentanyl-related deaths more than tripled (from 340 to 1119).<sup>1</sup> In 2015, Maryland enacted a “Good Samaritan” law to encourage people to call for help when someone is facing a medical emergency due to drugs or alcohol. This was a life-saving measure, but gaps remain in the law that prevent people from seeking life-saving interventions. In the meantime, Maryland has seen a 14% increase in opioid-related overdose deaths in the first three-quarters of 2020 compared to the same time the year before.

Our clients at Health Care for the Homeless routinely experience fears about arrest or interaction with police. Several clients fear that calling 911 might disrupt their housing stability. For example, they fear eviction from abandoned houses, in addition to arrest for burglary or trespassing. One client declined to call 911 after an overdose in the abandoned house where he was living, because he “didn’t want not to have no place to go.”<sup>2</sup> More stably housed participants feared eviction, as well. Interventions designed to encourage bystanders to stay at the scene to provide paramedics with information, or to call 911 without delay, may expedite emergency medical care and have a greater life-saving effect than interventions solely aiming to increase bystander 911 calls.<sup>3</sup>

Persistent gaps in Maryland’s Good Samaritan law, deterring people from seeking life-saving help.<sup>4</sup> We fully support SB 546, which will close these gaps and encourage people who are overdosing to seek the help they need. Therefore, Health Care for the Homeless respectfully requests a favorable report on this bill.
