Chairman Korman and the esteemed members of the House Environment and Transportation Committee:

My name is Krystle Okafor. I serve as the director of policy and planning at SHARE Baltimore, Baltimore’s community land trust (“CLT”) network. SHARE Baltimore is pleased to support HB0013, a bill which, once enacted, will provide CLTs the authority to develop condominiums. CLTs are nonprofit housing developers with a focus on inclusive growth. CLTs are working apace to rehabilitate and subsidize housing in the Baltimore neighborhoods of Belair-Edison, Curtis Bay, McElderry Park, Highlandtown, and Westport. The passage of HB0013 will allow our CLTs to further promote housing security for low- and moderate-income households in our city, which has a 19.6% poverty rate.

The hallmarks of the CLT model are permanent affordability and community stewardship. To achieve permanent affordability, CLTs acquire land, splitting title to the homes they develop and title to the land on which the home sits. Once CLTs have rehabilitated a property, they deed the home and ground lease the underlying land to low- and moderate-income buyers. The ground lease is coupled with subsidies, resale restrictions, and income-eligibility limits that ensure the home remains affordable to families in need in perpetuity. To achieve community stewardship, CLTs offer homeowners opportunities to engage in supportive services and neighborhood organizing, as well as the opportunity to govern the CLT as a member of its board of directors.

HB0013 is required because of CLTs' reliance on leased land. Under Maryland law, condominium regimes may generally not be established on leased land — doing so might destabilize the homeowners' tenure. However, since the CLT model is premised on permanent affordability documented and preserved in a 99-year, renewable ground lease, CLT's creation of affordable condominiums is inherently stable. CLTs thus merit an exception to this rule.

I urge you to pass HB0013 so that we at SHARE Baltimore and our member CLTs may continue to own and develop land for the benefit of the community. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
