

Sweden has a National Healthcare system for all. This has enabled them to collect data on every person who has received any type of medical treatment. They did a thirty-year study of the outcomes for the patients who received sex transitional medical interventions. The conclusion of this study states: “ This study found substantially higher rates of overall mortality, death from cardiovascular disease and suicide, suicide attempts and psychiatric hospitalization in sex-reassigned transsexual individuals compared to a healthy control population. “ The study showed that thirty years after receiving transitional medical interventions 24% of the patients had died. This number is roughly the same for males and females. In the general population only 7% of the women who were the same ages had died. The number was 9% for men in the general population. <https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/21364939/>

Sweden has restricted such health interventions for minors.

In the US we need each state to act individually to protect children. I urge you to require parental consent for minors to receive such interventions. Medical studies and information are difficult to understand. We should not expect minors to be able to process such complex information. We need to protect them in every way from harming their health and shortening their lives.
