Good afternoon Chair Beidle, Vice Chair Hayes, and members of the Senate Finance Committee.

My names is Elyshia Aseltine and I am an Associate Professor of Sociology, Anthropology & Criminal Justice at Towson University. There are many decisions that occur without meaningful faculty input, resulting in poorly researched, ill-fated, and unfair decisions that impact faculty lives and, as a result, those of students on our campuses. While many of our campuses have "shared governance" structures, decisions made by these groups are often symbolic and, when not, easily overruled by campus leadership. Increasingly, faculty are reliant on the benevolence of campus leadership when it comes to decision making about teaching-related decisions, workload considerations, faculty performance evaluations, instructional technologies, etc. As a faculty, we seek the opportunity to determine for ourselves if unionization makes sense for our campuses. Right now, that conversation is not even a possibility. This is deeply troubling for many of us. Please support our ability to have such a conversation.

Sincerely,

Elyshia Aseltine, Associate Professor
