

A few doors down from my sophomore year suite, there was a dorm room with an empty bed. That was supposed to be Lindsay's bed. I only met her once before she passed, but she left her contagious light and energy on every soul she touched. Lindsay should have been there that year, and every year after. I urge you to pass this bill requiring stricter fire safety regulations.