Dear Senators,

My name is Susan Collins, and I am writing to share my experience regarding insurance regulations for farm area-tagged vehicles. When renewing my insurance last year, I learned that Delaware and Pennsylvania have different rules for these vehicles compared to Maryland. I was informed that if Maryland adopted similar regulations, it could result in significant savings for farmers like my husband and myself.

As a farming family, we constantly seek ways to reduce costs and manage our expenses more effectively. Adjusting Maryland's policies to align with those of our neighboring states would provide much-needed financial relief to farmers across the state, helping us sustain our livelihoods and continue contributing to Maryland's agricultural economy.

I respectfully urge you to support this bill, which will not only ease the financial burden on farming families but also promote fairness and consistency in vehicle regulations across state lines. Your support will make a meaningful difference for Maryland's farming community.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Susan Collins
